

CHARGE TO THE GRADUATES

Diana Craigmile received her BSE degree in mechanical engineering from the University of Iowa in 1995. She currently serves as the lead packaging equipment engineer at Kellogg

Company. Prior to this role, she held positions at Nestle Professional, Oak State Products, and Lechler.

Much of Craigmile's career has been spent in the food industry where she worked on designing and commissioning lines for recognizable brands and products including: Oreo Cakesters, Panera's Mac & Cheese, and Rice Krispies Treats. Craigmile's current focus is on innovations in cereal production.

During her time at Iowa, Craigmile served as a member of Theta Tau, the Society of Women Engineers, American Society of Mechanical Engineers, and in the sorority Alpha Phi. Craigmile continues to remain active in those organizations.

Craigmile is a devoted Hawkeye and professional engineer who is passionate about seeing future Hawkeye engineers find their path to success. She is a season ticket holder for football and has established several scholarship funds that support both engineering students and student-athletes.
